“ *Memory from Her Hospice RN Case Manager, Stacy:
It was a privilege to care for her during her final months. She was a soft-spoken and remarkably resilient woman who faced her illness with quiet strength and grace. I'll never forget our last moment together — the day before her passing, when I had the honor of feeding her for the first and last time. Until then, she had always insisted on feeding herself, a reflection of her independence and dignity. That moment, though small, spoke volumes about her courage and her gentle spirit. She will always be remembered with warmth and respect.*
